LAW DEPARTMENT.

A Law Department in fact, was rendered possible by the passage of Chap. 23 of the Acts of the Twelfth General Assembly, approved March 9th, 1868, appropriating the sum of $20,000 for the purpose of making necessary repairs upon the buildings belonging to the University, and giving aid to the scientific department, and to such other departments as the Trustees should deem proper to establish. This act was understood to be a legislative recognition of the idea of a University in fact as well as in name. Accordingly, the Trustees of the University, at their regular June session in 1868, duly established a Law Department, and at an adjourned session, in September of the same year, placed the same in successful operation. It is worthy of note that, as originally established, the course of study in this department extended over two full years. The Board of Trustees only yielded this position in order to secure the merging of the Iowa Law School in the new department, thus removing a rival school from the State, and securing the services of its able corps of instructors. Now, that the Legislature has met the question and raised the standard of legal education to two full years, the friends of the course, as originally established, are to be congratulated.

It remains to be stated that, by the terms of the compact between the University authorities and the Iowa Law School, the graduates of the latter school were adopted as graduates of the Law Department of the University. Thus the founding of the Department was antedated, and made to include the graduates of the classes of 1866–8, both inclusive.
